OSG Billing Services Announces New Executive Appointments

ENGLEWOOD, NJ –November 10, 2009 – OSG Billing Services, a leader in the presentment and distribution of transactional documents, today announced the promotions and expanded responsibilities of two key executives. The promotions are in line with the company’s commitment to developing a strong and dynamic leadership team that will support the ongoing growth of the organization.

Rich Hoffman has been appointed to Chief Technology Officer (CTO), a newly created C-level position at OSG Billing Services. Previously the vice president of technical and operations, Hoffman will be focusing his efforts on ensuring that technology remains a competitive advantage for OSG Billing Services.

“Rich has been at the core of our technology and assessments for well over a decade,” said Hank Riner, chief executive officer of OSG Billing Services. “His knowledge of the company and our industry ensures that OSG has the best leadership in place to drive the growth of our business.

In addition, Albert Abbatiello has been appointed to senior director of operations. Previously the director of operations in the company’s east coast facility, Abbatiello will now be responsible with overseeing the print and mail productions at all OSG sites.

“Albert has done an amazing job of growing our production facilities while implementing best in class technology and controls,” said Riner. As we continue to expand our operations his expertise will be critical to the success of OSG and our customers.
